Marysville Community Plan

History of the Marysville area

Marysville is part of the traditional lands of the Taungurung people – the first people of the rivers and mountains. The Taungurung have lived in this region for over 65 thousand years. Their connection to country is very important to them. Traditionally, the Taungurung people lived off the land and rivers, not just hunting and gathering but also farming the land in a sustainable way, moving through the landscape based on seasonal change. The Taungurung people are closely affiliated with neighbouring tribes through language, ceremonies and kinship, as part of the Kulin nation.

The Yarra Track which wound its way from Chum Creek to the newly found goldfields of Jordan, Wood's Point and Gaffney's Creek, opened up as the goldfields and the influx of miners increased. Shanties and small communities developed along the routes to the goldfields to supply food, accommodation, fodder for horses, alcohol and company for the incoming prospectors.

Men bought tracts of land for sheep and cattle grazing and for growing crops to supply those en route to the goldfields.

Marysville was a stopping place on the way to Wood's Point. It was known as 'the Steavenson' for many years and was later named Marysville in honour of John Steavenson's wife. Steavenson was the Assistant Director of Roads and Bridges in the area during the mid-1800s.

Tall timber in and around Marysville attracted the timber industry. In the late 1880s paling cutters came and eventually mills were established. Bullock teams and draught horse teams were used to haul timber to mill sites. Villages sprang up around the mills, Cambarville and Anderson Creek for example.

Waterways, waterfalls and towering forests attracted visitors to Marysville as a destination, not simply an overnight stopping spot. Tourism in Marysville, Narbethong and Buxton became an industry.

Marysville and District was all but totally destroyed by a firestorm of incredible intensity on the night of 7 February 2009. The impact of this was enormous physically, emotionally and economically. The people of Marysville are survivors of something horrific but they will not be defined by what happened; communities kept together, friendships were formed and the resilient people had the purpose and courage to begin again. There was love, hope and faith in the future which is what makes this place what it is.

Marysville Community Plan

Gathering ideas and working on priorities :

Throughout 2019 and into 2020, community members have been meeting to talk about community planning – how to do it and what ideas people had for projects for Marysville. The Marysville Community Planning Coordination Group has been steering the process. Seventy ideas for making Marysville an even better place were collected during the time.

Where did all these possible project ideas come from?

- The Community Planning launch dinner in June 2019 and subsequent meetings
- Marysville Primary School's Junior Council representatives collected ideas in their classes and presented them for the Community Plan
- A Youth Group Pizza Night saw the young people of Marysville contribute ideas
- A popcorn stall at the 2019 'Get Ready Day' by Marysville Triangle Foundation gathered new ideas from passers-by, including visitors, as well as feedback on the ideas already gathered
- Feedback from visitors that has been given to MiRa for how to make Marysville even better for tourism
- Conversations over coffee and around the town

In March 2020, everyone who lives, works, volunteers or otherwise feels connected to Marysville was invited to a community dinner to work out the most important projects for Marysville and to form Action Teams to work on these ideas. More than seventy community members attended, and more than forty people were unable to attend but provided their votes on the ideas ahead of the event. The eight priorities mentioned above and associated Action Teams were formed on the night, based on the priorities of all participating community members.

Other ideas that recieved significant support in the community:

From seventy ideas and the votes of more than one hundred people, the top eight ideas were chosen to prioritise and form Action Teams and these are reflected in the Community Plan.
